GENTRAL POLICE COURT.

MONDAY.

BIYOTH Mesers. Pearce, Meyer, Murphy, Hunt, Powell, Vickey, Spence, Macintosh, and Smart.

Thirty-five persons were fined for, or 10s., or 20s., according to the circumstance of each case, for drunkenness or for disorderly conduct; and three were fined 40s. each for using elected lenguage.

Margarat Halloran was brought before the Beach on Saturday, charged with being an title and disorderly person, and in reply said that also could prove that she had a good boots in Paraments street, near St. Besseliot's Church, and that she worked hard at washing and iroundy. Mr. Smart said that to afford her an oppertunity of proving her statement he would remand her until Monday (to-day). She would rather, she said, be dealt with at once, and hoped that the Beach would dead remanded until Monday for the production of her witnesses, he obtain not, like other blookparafs, turn round and compilely that the magistrates dealt hardly with her. This morning, accordingly, she was again called up, and, a revidence being offered in support of her distance, she was serverned to be imprisoned three mouths.

Elies Bleeshy was charged with stealing from the person.

WATER POLICE COURT.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Beyone the Water Police Magistrate, with Mesers. Lester, Solemon, and Williams.

Several drunkards were dealt with in the usual way.

Jointee Driscoll, for using obscene language on Queen's Wharf, was fined 20s., or seven days in gool.

Thomas Byrnes, convicted of a similar offence, was fixed 60s., or one month in gool.

Thomas Reer, for indecent conduct in Cumberlandstreet, was fixed 20s., or to be imprisented for seven days.

Rilen Webb, who pleaded guilty to a charge of using obscene language, was fixed 10s., or four days in gool.

Gregory White was charged with stealing the sum of 15s. in silver, the property of Mary Hill. Prosecutivis deposed that she met prisoner, and walked to Paddington with him it hay had a drink together on the way, and suddenly prisoner put his hand into her pocket and took the money in question. It appeared from the evidence of the apperhending constable that prosecutivis had a hole in her pocket at the time. Prisoner, who was defended by Mr. J. Lowe, was discharged.

Mary Cavanagh, charged with being of unsound mind, was ordered to be sent to the receiving-house at Darling-harst for medical treatment.

Arthur Johnstone was charged with attempting to stab Edward Shingles, with intent to do grievous bodily harm, and was committed to take his trial at the next Court of Quarter Rowsions.

Symmons Shirker.—There were twenty-two cases on the summons sheet, in which inspector Oran prosecuted for breaches of the Transit Commissioners' By-laws. William Hayes was charged with assaulting William Anthony Kingroote, It appeared that defendant had been driving prosecutor to several places, ending with the Manly Beach steamer what. Prosecutor offered the cabman 2s, which the latter refused to take, and demanded 3s. Mr. Kingscote at first refused to pay this amount, and attempted to go on board the steamer, when defendant put his bands on prosecutor, and provented him from going on board the steamer, when defendant put his bands on processory, and provente

THE BORDER DUTIES CONVENTION.

The BORDER DUTES CONVENTION.

The following is the reply of the Chief Secretary of Victoria to the letter of the Colonial Secretary of New South Wales on the abrogation of the Border Treaty:—

Chief Secretary's Office, Melbourne,
21st February, 1814.

Sir,—In your letter of the 10th instant, which I had the honour to receive on the 16th idem, you complain of the publication of my letter to you of 30th January at so early a date as the 6th February. I had satticipated that the communication would have been in your hands cortainly on that day, and I may assure you that in publishing it then there was no discourteey intended towards your Government, but it was exceedingly desirable that a letter enveying information as to the reasons of this Government for retiring from the treaty (about which so many aspeculative explanations had been hearrded, and so much public anxiety had been evinced both in New South Wales and Victoria should not be unnecessarily delayed in its publication.

I have no desire to adopt, and shall cortainly refrain from which were in fact merely an earnest representation of the necessity for pretecting Victorian revenue without any possible injury to that of New South Wales; and I would here repeat none of the surgestions made by me were projudical to New South Wales or the residents of its border, but were simply proposals calculated to prevent gods subject to a lower duty in New South Wales than in Victoria being taken across under cover of the treaty to this colony to the manifest detriment of its revenue.

I may bemark as regards your statement that you officially informed me at the very time of the first invitation to consider the convention, that fiscal alterations were in opitemplation by your Government, that I mentioned in my better of 30th January that this Government was only acquisinted with general and not particular information, which being only probabilities could not consistently with safety be recognised in connection with the subject then under consideration; and I would again say that there was no sutherisative or official sanouncement given as to the detail or even nature of these alterations until Mr. Lloyd made them known in his financial statement to your Legislative Assembly in October last.

With reference to my remarks as to the departure of Mr. Samuel induction; me in not deferring the settlement of the question, and the comments which you offer in the sixth paragraph of your letter, I allege that it is usually the gractice for those members of a Government who may requisively anything the parties to any convention, alons to execute it, and if a deviation from this practice occurred as regards your agreement with South Australia, I was not aware of it.

Upon the subject of the tobscoo importations, I have to add that the assistance first sought from your Government was correct, particulars as to the congress of the ordinary importation across the whale information. Your telegram of 25th November you will admit was at least indefinite, and it aspearing that more reliable information was a long to the

upon which you laid so much stress in endeavouring to persuade this Government that a speculation of sending technologous this Government that a speculation of sending technologous from Sydney to Victoria could not be profitable. It was not possible for me to return the letter to you for with drawal; but I published your telegram of explanation, with the letter containing the erroneous inflormation.

It is a matter of some interest to perceive that the "mercantile firm of bigh standing" represented by Mr. Watson has not, so far as I am aware, afforded any explanation of the discrepancies to which I invited your stlention in my letter of 30th January. In the debate which occurred in your Assembly on the 4th February, to the report of which my attention has been called, Mr. Watson, in one part of his speech, states that "from 24th December to 9th January they (Fraser and Co) sent about 18 tors tobacco." He also read the letter dated 21st January, which the same firm wrote to you, and which caused your telegram of 21st, in which he save, "Early this month we sent a parcel of tobacco to Melbourne by way of Albury, and we last evening received a telegram from our agents, initiating that the Custom-house officers of the Victorian Government had siezed the tabacco when it was crossing the Murray, and it is now detained by them." I have so far quoted these statements, and merely contrast them with the facts as obtained from reliable sources. The first portion of the tobacco left Sydney on the 17th portion, about 24 itons gross weight, left the first week in January, and was rushed down to arrive before the end of the month. The first portion crossed into Vistoria and was detained on the 23nd and 31st December respectively. A third portion, about 24 itons gross weight, left the first week in January, and was rushed down to arrive before the end of the month. The first portion crossed into Vistoria and was detained on the 23nd and 31st December respectively.

From a reconsideration of the draft tresty submitted with my l

being waged between spiritual despotism and modern liberty, we have seen a series of struggles octending over a quarter of a century, the leader in which has been Prince Bismarck.

In this light the German Chancellor may be fairly claimed as what his countrymen call a world-historical man. Though Germany has a predominant, she has no exclusive interest in him. He belongs to the nine-teenth century and to Europe. His life is of general interest, and in its main outlines the story of the earlier portion of it may best be briefly told by allowing the words of the Chancellor, with a few incidents of his career interwoven, to tell their own tale.

Bismarck's introduction to public life was scircely more favourable than that of the present leader of the Raglish Conservative party in the House of Commons. English journalists have often dwelt on the proud prophetic words in which, at the moment of seeming discomfiture, Mr. Disraeli foreshadowed his future triumph. Bismarck's first words at the sitting of the Three Estates, in May, 1847, were certainly not less significant, though of a less personal character. The Dett was in the midst of a vague but passionate discussion on the form of the Constitution, and the right especially of the people to a larger share in the government of the country. One of the deputies, carried away by his enthusiam, alleged that in 1813 the great object of the people, in rising to throw off the foreign yoke, had been that they might obtain a popular constitution. Were those who had saved the Fatherland with the Throne not entitled to govern themselves? At this point a deputy wearing the King's colours, in the flush of early manhood, suddenly appeared in the tribune. Of masculine stature, with hair and beard cut short, large bright piercing eyes, and with the aspect of vigorous health on his ruddy countenance, the spoker in shrill and somewhat hesitating accents ventured to ask bis hearers to return from the region of romance to reality. He felt compelled to contradict the assertion made freq

Experiments with Moscurrors.—bome interesting experiments with mosquitoes have lately been made by Professor Mayer in the United States, who, at a session of the Academy of Sciences, at the Steven's Institute, Hoboken, gave an account of his discoveries with regard to these insects. He said that by plucing a male mosquito under the microscope, and sounding various notes of tuning forks in the range of a sound given by the female mosquito, the various fibres of the antennar of the male mosquito vibrated sympathetically to these various wounds. The longest fibres vibrated sympathetically to the grave notes, and the short fibres vibrated sympathetically to the higher notes: the fact that the nocturnal insects have highly organised antennar, while the diurnal ones have not, and also the fact that the snatomy of these parts of insects shows a highly developed nervous organisation, leads to the inference that these facts form the first sure basis of reasoning in reference to the nature of the anditory apparatus of insects. The experiments were also extended in a direction which added new facts to the physiology of the senses. If a sonorous impulse strike a fibre so that the direction of the impulse is in the direction of the fibre, then the fibre remains stationary. But if the direction of the sonorous with more intensity, until the insect naturally turns in the direction of the sonorous entered the sonorous entered the sonorous entered to within five degrees the position of the sonorous entered to within five degrees the position of the sonorous centre.

Cloart Pipes.—Dr. Alfred Carpenter, writing to the Times from Croydon as to the outbreak of typhoid fever at Cambridge, says:—"All evidence points to a want of ventilation in the soil-pipes of the water-slocets as the real defect. If it were not for much evidence daily forthcoming, it might be supposed that the discussion which arose in the Times and other journals after the illness of the Prince of Wales, and the publicity the Times gave to the causation of that illness, as well as pointing out the proper means that should be adopted to prevent the origin of similar discases in other establishments.—I say it might be supposed that no unventilated soil-pipes could exist in places containing a moderate amount of collective wisdom. The Times gave full publicity to the only plan which is effectual in preventing the origin of typhoid fever from the introduction of the germs of the disease with sewer gases. The plan has been in operation for many years in this place, and has benished typhoid as an epidemic, and experience in many others has shown its beneficial effect. Yet the health authority in our mathematical University town sltogether ignores the remedy, and allows the disease to lay low same of Rajand's noblest sons. Stinks in the open air, if there is plenty of fresh air is a state of movement to oxidise the cause of the stinks, are harmless compared with the effect of those concentrated gases which find their way at some time or other into every house where the stift-pipe of the closet is not properly ventilated. This ventilation is assaily effected by continuing the soil-pipe upwards and outwards, and opening into the external air at a line some feet above the level of the trap which is below the water-closel itself, care being taken that no right-angles are allowed to exist in the ventilation; or its efficiency will be seriously interfered with. It is a simple and, comparatively, an inexpens

TUESDAY, MARCH 3, 1874.

TUESDAY, MARCH 3, 1874.

This debate, if debate it can be called, which took place in the Assembly on Friday evening with reference to the Bishopthorpe Ketate Bill was another illustration of the abuse of Parliamentary privilege which is now becoming altogether too common. The Assembly was kept up to the small hours, not for the purpose of argument, but principally to witness the spectacle of an infuriated member lashing himself into impotent rage, and exhausting himself into impotent rage, and exhausting himself into impotent rage, and exhausting himself in the standard of the particular measure under discussion, it is undoubtedly open to hostile criticism, and arguments have been advanced against it which do not appear to have been fully and fairly dealt with by the House; and in so far as opposition is kept up with the view of forcing attention to objections imperfectly replied to, or with the view to put those objections in a fresh light, and press them home with fresh illustration, such opposition is not only legitimate but is the duty of those who think the matter of sufficient importance to warrant the effort. The very object of debate is to arouse the interest of the House, and to draw out everything which is at all germane to the matter in hand, so as to get it looked at from every possible point of view. This is the only way to prevent oversights, mistakes, and injustice, and also the only way to secure thorough publicity to every transaction, and by means of tice, and also the only way to secure thorough publicity to every transaction, and by means of the Press to bring the whole public into council To enable even a very small minority to get to To enable even a very small minority to get to the root of the matter, the right of free speech in Parliament has been very carefully guarded; but this right is not used it is only abused, when members talk against time simply to provoke a count-out. The majority not only must govern ultimately, but has a right to govern, and no one, however he may dislike the conclusion arrived at, is entitled to impeach that right. Talking against time after full govern, and no one, however he may dislike the conclusion arrived at, is entitled to impeach that right. Talking against time after full debate, and simply with a view to prevent the majority having its way, is an attempt at tyranny—and a tyranny all the more censurable seeing that it can only be exercised by abusing a privilege established expressly to protect the minority against the majority. Somebody must rule, and on what principle can any one say that it is fair to the many to give way to the few? In the Assembly on Friday there was a minority of three. That minority may possibly have been right in the view it took of the bill. But still, when it had exhausted its argument it had done its duty to the public, and it was not justified in saying to the majority—you shall not have your way. No minority is responsible for the wrongdoing of the majority; but it is responsible, first, for doing its utmost to show the badness of a bad measure; and, secondly, it is responsible for not damaging the right of free speech by the abuse of it. It is obvious that every one who occupies the position of a member of Parment is a trustee of Parliamentary privilege. He is not only entitled to the privilege, but he is at the same time one of its guardians. He can claim it, but at the same time he is bound to protect it; and it is one of his duffies to see that the privilege suffers no detriment at his hands, and that he is no party to its being demaged by others. Moderation and self-retreint, therefore, as well as energy, diligence, and enthusians, are required of a representative of the people.

All this might have been said with reference to Friday's debate, even if the tone of the chief speaker had been unexceptionable; but the midemeanor was aggravated by the ribaldry in which the member for the Western Goldfields allowed himself to indulge. On many ficids allowed himself to indulge. On many occasions he has revealed himself all force and no judgment, but on this occasion he outdit himself. To his own religious opinious he is as fully entitled as any other member of the community, but he is not entitled to deny that right to others. He may hold his own view about the value of bishops, but others are equally entitled to a different estimate. The the ological tirade that was dragged into the debate was altogether wide of the question, and had nothing whatever to do with it. Neither the value nor the costliness of the episcopal office had anything whatever to do with the question as to whether it was right for the Pailiament to charge the incoming bishop with part of the cost of the BISHOT's palace. Parliament had established a certain endowment for the see, and it was being asked for its approval for a certain act done by the trustee of that endowment. That question could surely have been debated without going into ecclesiastical discussions as to the propriety of having bishops at all. The abuse heaped upon Dr. Barker individually was dissipated with the breath that uttered it. A character of twenty years' standing is not injured in a moment because a violent man was dissipated with the breath that uttered it. A character of twenty years' standing is not injured in a moment because a violent man indulges himself in the pastime of calling hard names. Dr. BARKER has served in a high office for a long period, and has won the respect not only of his own Church but of sister Churches. Opinions may differ as to the propriety of many of his acts, or the wisdom of some of his speeches, or the soundness of his judgment. But this is only what is incident to every man who is placed as the chief-of a great establishment and who is called upon to exercise a great deal of authority. But no decent man would make any such difference of opinion a ground for imputations on personal opinion a ground for imputations on personal character. When Mr. Buchanan took advan tage of the opportunity of free speech accorded to him in the Assembly to compel hon. mem-bers to listen to him while he denounced the bers to listen to him while he denounced the Bishop of Sydwey as a "rank impostor," "a ghoul," "a usurer," "a sneak," "a genuine burglar," he damaged not the Bishop, but himself. The person who was suffering under his maledictions was the person who uttered them. Every epithet came back like a boomerang to the feet of the man who hurled it.

the privilege of free speech. AT the laying of the foundation stone of a new Public school at Tempe on Saturday tast, Pro-fessor SMITH stated that, so far as his personal observation enabled him to judge, the educacontrast favourably with that in England, in America, and in Victoria. We have no one in the colony better fitted, on the whole, to form the colony better fitted, on the whole, to form a judgment on a matter of that kind than Professor Shith. Himself practised in the art of teaching, he has also been for a long term of years a member of our central department of education. His recent travels in America, England, and Victoria have enabled him to see with the eye of an expert what is doing there, and it is in the highest degree satisfactory, therefore, to have his authority for the fact that for the money we spend we get as much as, if not more than, those of our race and linesge are getting in other parts of the world where they, like ourselves, are carrying out the great problems of government and social improvement. Mr. MATTHEW ARNOLD, who is a school inspector of now great experience, improvement. Mr. MATTHEW ARNOLD, who is a school inspector of now great experience, when speaking recently in England, rather disparaged the results obtained in some of the American schools. There was no fault to be found with the zeal exhibited or the money expended, but he considered a good deal of the outcome to be more showy than sound. This of course is not a thing to be aimed at. The object is not display, but solid results. We must not estimate the worth of our system by a few show pupils, but by the general effect wrought upon the minds and characters of those who are taught. We must study the result as a whole, and compare that result with the state of things that prevailed before we made that effort, and with the state of things under the corresponding effort elsewhere.

It was a very damaging speech—to the speaker. The House had no option but to endure the infliction, because it had no resource but either to close the debate by a "count sut," which, in its judgment, would have been unjust to the BISHOP, or to propose a restriction of debate, which would have been a restraint of corresponding effort elsewhere.

CAUTION TO CABMEN.—At the Water Police Court, peterday, a calman named Charles Lee was final 13, with costs of Court, for refessing to take a fare, under the following circumstances:—On Tuesday last, it appeared, Mrs. Harris, of Forbas-sirect, sent for a cab to convey her and from that locality to Mr. Bowyer's school, Glebe Rosd. Petendast, being first on the rank, was accordingly summered, and was offered for the journey, by Mrs. Harris, the sum of 2a. 6d.—the smount she usually paid. It happened that the day was very wet, and there was a small trunk containing clothes to go with the young gentleman, which the lady wished to go inside the cab, so as not to get wet. The cahman thereupon refused to go made 2s. 6d., on the ground, as he stated, that to have the box inside would be likely to damage his cab. This sum Mrs. Harris, clothind to pay, and as the cabman refused to faths the fare she now summoned him before the Bench. Defendant, in Court, stated that he offered to take the job for labut this offer on his part was denied by Mrs. Harris. It was shown by the evidence of inspector Oram that the journey should have been done in half-an-hour, and that therefore the 2a. 6d. offered by Mrs. Harris was over and above the legal fare. The Water Police Magisirate, in pronouncing the semience of the Court, as above, remarked that the constantly heard for instances of overcharge on the pert of cahman, but where the persons aggrieved preferred rather to put up with the imposition than to have been willing to risk if for the distance in the first pay the columns. Hon. G. A. Lloyd (Colonial Tressurer), was unanimously awarded to him before the audience separated.

St. DAVID'S DAY.—The feative day of the parten saint of the Ancient Britons having fallen on Stunday last, was calcibrated by the Cymri yessireday with a tea-meeting and soirce, held at the old Temperance Hall. There were about two buttered persons and down to tea, and there were about twice that number at the entertainment which was given afterwards, Alderman Ruyshy being in the chair. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, and addresses, some of the latter being given in the Welob inquage. A novel feature in the entertainment consisted of competitions in singing, recitations, and addresses, some of the latter being given in the Welob inquage. A novel feature in the entertainment consisted of competitions in singing, recitations, and addressing on a unstudied subject, and the efforts of the several competitors excited much interest and applause. A young lady, apparently about five or six years of age, delighted the audience with her rendering of the old diving. There is noe luck shout the house, and was unanimously encored. Mr. Edward Baseett performed the muchal accompaniments on the larp, and Mr. D. Bassett sang some fine old Welch meldides. The entertainment was a decided success, judging from the hearty applause with which the efforts of the various performers and speakers were greeted.

CITY MISSION CHAPEL.—The annual meeting in connection with the above place of worship, situated at the corner of Sussex and Liverpool streats, took place last svening in the chapel. About 200 persons sat down to tea, after which the public meeting was held, presided over by Captain Harrington, of the ship England. The proceedings commenced with praise and prayer. The obsirment then addressed the meeting, referring, in the course of his remarks, to events in America, Chima, Japan, and India, all within the last twenty years—events which he believed had greatly added to the facilities for spreading the grouped through the agency of missionsries. In conclusion he gave it as his opinion that a most extensive field for missionary enterprise could be found in this city alone. Mr. Little, in the capacity of secretary, read the annual report—the first from the smalgamation of the open air missions in the city and Waterloo with the City Mission Chapel. This report stated that the results of the past year's labours had been very gratifying. Cases were then read of persona who, it was stated, had been brought to Christ through the open-air meetings in Hyde Park—ameng them a Chinese, who if was said had since been instrumental in leading several of his countrymen to attend church. It was mentioned, in conclusion, that a small sun remained on the wrong side of the balance-sheet. The meeting was then addressed by the Rev. Thomas Gainford and other friends. No. 5.—COIN AND LIABILITIES.

The liabilities now referred to consist of one-third of the joint amount of their note circulation and open deposits. For these, the banks should be prepared by a reserve of specie of equal amount. Subjoined is the state of the case during each of the past four quarters.

Taking the banks as a whole, there was in March a surplus of coin to the extent of £26,900; in the June quarter the surplus had disappeared, and there was a deficiency of £11,500; in the September quarter the deficiency had become £437,600; during the last quarter the deficiency was lessened to £273,068.

THE COLLECTION OF THE RAILWAY RATE AT LAURCESTON.—Up to Thursday last the total number of judgments in the procedutions for the Launceston railway rates was 476, and the aggregate sums ordered to be paid amount to £1517 7a. The Launceston Examiner states that a system of violence has been common ed under the suspices of chief bailiff Propsting, the consequence of which suspices of caser battle registring to consequence of where it is impossible to predicate. Several instances of where wielence has been used by the bailiff and his men in order to get consession of goods are given, one of which we append:—Thomas Youl, general dealer, York-street, rate 21 de. Yesterday morphing, about 11.20, Mr. Propeting and cleven other constables went to Youl's place and append:—Thom.2 Not., general dealer, Nork-arres, rate £1 6s. Yesterday morbing, shout 11,20, Mr. Propeting and eleven other constables went to Youl's place and demanded admission. The shop has been closed for three weeks, and Youl made no accret of his intention to prevent the building from getting into his house. Youl was at home; his wife was not. Youl refused to open the door, upon which Propeting attempted to force an entrance, one of his men using a crowbar, which he handled somewhat dexterously, and three or four stallwart men endeavouring to force open the door, but for some time without effect, as the door was, it appears, well blocked inside. The assanit was continued a quarter of an hour, when at last brute force prevailed, and the door was broken open. Propeting pushed three or four of his men into the place first, like a discreet general, and then followed. When the men not in they found Youl on the followed. When the men not in they found Youl on the followed. When the men not in they found Youl on the followed. When the men not in they found Youl on the Youl stigning out lustily "Murder, marder"; his threat was then clutched, and he was in a measure gauged, while the bailth helped themselves to abent three dozon pairs of boots—men is, women s, and children s. Mr. Propeting stome told his men to let Youl np, but upon their essaying to do so be became violent, and they had to continue that hold of him until they had secured the plunder. A 1-rge erowed of persons assembled in York-street, and the neighbourhood was in a state of ferment for some hours afterwards. Mr. Westbrook and Mr. Hills hearing cries of "murder!" same up, and wished to go in to see what was the matter, but they were prevented by some of our own mulcipal police. The door was shut while the constables were doing their duty (!) inside. Youl's wife wanted to go into he controlled wice. He eaknowledges that if he had had been restrained he should have killed the first man that entered his "castle." He was provided with a broad word, wh justice, if he can, for the breaking into his house, damiging his door, and nearly breaking his back.

The Joachim Case.—A public meeting was held at Leniliquin on Monday, the 23rd February, for the purpose of devising means to assist the selectors on the Moirs run who have been of late subjected to considerable amoyance and pecuniary loss, owing to the action taten by Mr. John O'Shanasey. Mr. Cheriton occupied the chair. The meeting, as we gather from the Heniliquis Chronicle, adopted a memorial addressed to the Minnier of Lands, as Bydney, in which the facts consected with Mr. Joschim's case were fully stated. It concludes as follows:—"We are of opinion that Mr. Joschim is a man of the strictest honour and integrity. He has a large family to support, and has we believe, on bohalf of his children, to the very best of his ability, carried out the provisions of the Land Act, both in its spirit and letter. He has been put to much pecuniary loss by the long delay and expense of removing to Sydney." The following resolution was also adopted:—"That this meeting, believing that in the Joschim case there has been a basty and unjust interference with selectors 'rights under the Land Law by the Land Secretary, cordisily endorses the memorial now read, and will arrange a list of canvassers for funds to canable Mr. William Joschim to protect the legal rights of his children in the actions now pending for truspass in the Supreme Court." A number of gentlemen were appointed to canvasse the districts specified, to collect subscriptions on behalf of Mr. Jonchim.

FLAX IN THE GULGONG DISTRICT.—The public of Gulgong and the surrounding district, says the Gulgong dryses, may not be generally aware that the true lax, or phomeium tenax of botany, grows inturinally as an indigenous plant in this neighbourhood. In Rouse's paddock bundreds of tons of it might have over gathered last year and turned to profitable secount, and it may be met with everywhere in the bash where the soil is favourable to its growth. Mr. Colhoun, who is well acquainted not only with the plant but with the whole process of the manufacture of this article of commerce, has taken the trouble to preserve a quantity of the seed, which he has left at our office for distribution in small quantities to those who have gardens and are willing to try experiments for the cultivation of the plant on an extensive scale. Where the flax grows wild, and as intigenous, it must necessarily flourish by on thivation, and as flax is largely sought for both in Europe and the colonies, and is overy year becoming dearer in price in consequence of the increased demand for it in the manufactories of the world, it might become a valuable addition to the sultivated productions of this district. The Mudgee district furnishes to the markets of Europe and America the finest descriptions of the also. Nearly fifty years ago this plant was found in a native state growing luxuriantly on the Hunter, but it has remained in obscurity and been unnoticed ever since, seeding from year to year, and propagating itself under the most adverse circumstances, from its being scurrily treated as a weed it only for eradication by the hoe or the plough. FLAX IN THE GULGONG DISTRICT.—The public

ANTI-THUDICHUM.—Dr. Thudichum's report on some Victorian wines, although it should perhaps be damaging only to the reputation of that gentleman, has (says the Argue) done harm to the interest of our growers here. It is therefore with much pleasure that we were shown a letter received from Ragland by the last February mail, reporting on Victorian wines which had not been destroyed by a long exposure upon the shelves of the Khibition. The writer of this letter is the Right Hen. Sir Edward Vaughan Williams, formerly one of the Canglah judges, and a member of her Majosty's Privy Council. It is addressed to the Hon. Mr. Justice Fellows, who, prosons publics, sutherised the publication of the following extract:—"I am sure that you have never been properly thanked for your magnificent and acceptable present of wine. We took some of it down to Stratford-on-Avon, where we had hired a house for the summer, and we curesives and our guests all agreed in the most cordial and manimous admiration of the wines. We think the flavour of the white most rich and delicate, and the red has a generosity which is commendable to the highest degree. It is surely a great triumph to the colony to have rivalled the Tuscon and Falerians, and all other European vintages. I am sure it is only necessary to make it known, and it will speedily find its way in Europe as a luxury of the most refined and precious order." To the letter is added: "P.S.—One of my friends in very axious to know whether there is any agent in London to receive orders for the wine." As the question of strength, and of furly in Kagland, is at present agitated amongst our vignerous, we may as well say that the wines above alluded to were both red and white, of a district well known for the lightness and delicacy of its wines: and that both had entered England under the shilling duty. As the word generosity may be so construed as to imply that the red wine was a strong one, we would observe that it specially apapiles to a light wine. Generosity may be continued to the second all there is a future for our wines.

MONDAY. The Rockhampton Sub-collector of Customs has received a letter from Mr. Ross, a squatter residing at Bald Hill, twenty miles from North Rockhampton, stating that a very large ship, name unknown, came in sight this morning, and anchored twelve miles north-east of his (Mr. Ross's) house; her foretopmast north-east of his (Mr. Ross's) house; her foretopmast and mainmast were gone; the mizen mast was broken in the middle, and not a rag of sail was left. The ship's flag was not described. The foremast remained, Mr. Ross had no boat, and was unable to go to the vessel. The wind was north-east, and there was a smooth sea; but Ross considers that the vessel would be in a bad position if the wind increases. He believes it is not the Landsborough, which left the port for Callao shortly after the commencement of the late cyclone. The Courier strongly deprecates any rush to the Palmer gold-fields at present, as it would be kighly suicidal to the interest of the miners. The privation experienced there now is far beyond anything which can be pictured by the imagination. It is impossible to state certainly when communication will be re-established between the Palmer and the Endeavour Rivers, notwithstanding that the Colonial Secretary has telegraphed to the Police Magistrate at Cooktown to use every effort, and to spare no expense, to open communication for the transit of supplies to the Palmer gold-field at once. He has directed the purchase of timber, and the employment of labour, to construct rafts or punts for the transport of supplies across flooded rivers between Cooktown and the diggers in their present critical position.

PROPOSED IMPROVEMENTS AT SIRGULAR QUAY.

It had long been recognised not only by the mercantile community, but by the Government, that some extension of the accommodation for shipping at the Circular Quay was absolutely required, and the select committee of last assisting the commodation for shipping at the circular Quay was absolutely required, and the select committee of last assisting upon the evidence of a large number of our leading upon the evidence of a large number of our leading upon the evidence of solution of the committee, one by the Engineer-in-chief for Has bours (Mr. Moriarty), one by Lieutenant Gowlland, and one by the Hagineer-in-chief for Has bours (Mr. Moriarty), one by Lieutenant Gowlland, and one by Mr. Flood, the first two being those which were more immeasured to the first two heing those which were more immeasured to the first two heing those which were more immeasured to the first two has a both by the last head of the first two heins were before any decision was arrived at Since these plans were before the committee another plan has been submitted to the Government and the public by Mr. Selfe, an engineer whose name has been before the public on several occasions in connection with other important engineering matters. As a matter of course, great interest has been fell, more especially amongst the mercantile and shipping interest, in these several propositio for wharfage extension, and to satisfy guillo curiosity in this respect Mr. Selfe has exhibited the plans and drawings of his improvements, together with a model of the same made to scale, at the Exchange, where the plans and drawings of his improvements, together with a model of the same made to scale, at the Exchange, where the plans and drawings of his improvements, together with a model of the same made to scale, at the Exchange, where the plans and drawings of his improvements, together with a model of the same made to scale, at the Exchange, where the plans and drawings of his improvements, together with a model of the same m methods that require the closest inspection, and the most refined calculations.

To some of our readers such questions as this plan is considered to have some dissavantages, an account of the double moving, although on the whole it is a good one.

Mr. Morierty's plan is for a wharf of wrought from girders, planked with colonial hardwood supposted on cast from cylinders, the form being that of a series of steps 180 feet long from the projecting point on the castern side of the quary both ways north and south, the centre berth being 160 feet long, or 100 feet more than the original design. By this arrangement all the length of the vessel over the 180 feet overaps the next one, and as we have now vessels visiting the port that are 300 feet long, without their bowsprits, there is a possibility of the inner ships being inconvenienced when coming to, or leaving their berths; and as the whole of the material is proposed to be imported, there are many who think that it is not desirable to send the large sum of money that it would ceat out of the colony, if materials can be found here to do the work; norrower the perishable nature of wrought iron plates in proximity to sait wa'er is patent to any person acquainted with the constant decay going on in iron ships, and the constant renewals required.

salt wa'er is patent to any person acquainted with the constant decay gring on in iron ships, and the constant remewals required.

The plan proposed by Mr. Selfe is for series of wharfs or jetties built at an angle with the main line of the Quay, in such a manner that one side of the jetty is 200 or more feet long, and the other only 50 feet, the jetties are 30 feet wide, and the intervening spaces 50 feet, the vessols lie one at each jetty with their strens in the dock formed by the projecting pier heads; a distance of 80 feet being transversely trum the face of one jetty to the next one allows room for colliers or lighters to come alongside every vessel when at its berth, and no notice flow long a vessel is, it cannot interfere with the next one, as the head goar projects out towards the centre of the cove; thus in the case of berths 200 feet long, permitting a vessel say of 2000 tons to discharge comfortably, the stright line of the present quay occupied is only 170 feet, whereas if such a vessel lay at an ordinary quay wall the overall length without bowsprit would be about 300 feet.

Ar Selfe's plan provides accommodation for 12 vessels the overall length without bowsprit would be about 300 feet.

Mr. Selfe's plan provides accommodation for 12 vessels 3 on the southern end, commencing from about the Prince's stairs, and 9 on the castern side, but it is only accommodation for six that it is proposed to construct at present. These are shown on the model now lying at the Exchange, and extend to about 80 yards be, and the Blackwell Stores. The model is to a scale of 40 feet to the inch, and the bertha are 180, 200, 350, 200, 250, and 200 feet long, with the following vessels occupying the respective places:—The Parramatta, Hydrapes, Sobrson, Macgregor (a.), Samuel Plimsoll, and Bennore.

Hydrapes, Sobraon, Macgregor (a.), namues l'imaou, and Bennore.

The principal points which Mr. Belfe aimed at attaining in designing this arrangement were the following:—Pirstly, to provide accommodation for vessels of the modern class (as lenglish ships of 750 to 900 tons are becoming things of the past). Secondly, to arrange the berthe in such a manner that the bringing a vessel to or from its place would not interfere with its neighbours, and that all moorings, don, should be quite independent, so that in case of a fire or objective a vessel could haul out at a moment's notice; in the southcast corner (the most difficult part to deal with in any system) the berth is 350 feet long, and could be longer if required.

resest count haut out at a moment's notice; in the south-cast corner (the most difficult part to deal with in any system) the berth is 350 feet long, and could be longer if required.

1 molly, to place a shed or covering in such a position as to allow drays to take the goods either from the ship; tachies direct, or frem the shed if stored there, by backing up against a platform under cover, the versandsh of the shed coming so close to the vessel sude that by extending a tarpaulin over the hatchways, the work of loading or discharging the vessel could be carried on in wet weather, the columns or supports being 20 feet agast to allow drays to draw easily under cover; and one and of the shed arrenged so as to be enclosed for a temporary bond if thought desirable.

Fourthly, to arrange the whole system in such a manner that in the event of the railway ever being extended to the Circular Quay no alteration would be necessary, as the berths form natural sidings to a line running all round; and leatily to construct the whole of a durable and permanent material and one that we have alongside, stone being easily obtained, and the quarrying away of the rocks at the N.W. corner will form a large frontage of valuable building sites. Should the whole be built of timbor, as being more economical, it is believed that it will not be necessary to copper the piles, as the cobra, or tergelo navalis, does not pursue has work where the water is much contaminated with sewage. This may be seen at many wharfs round the shores of the harbour.

It is all o proposed to furnish these wharfs with hydraulic witches and craner; and Mr. Selfe has obtained from England estimates and particulars of the most approved and modern system, through Mr. Dunlop, late managing partner of P. N. Russell and Co. of this city. Mr. Dunlop visited the Docka, &c., expressly for this purpose, and has forwarded estimates from Sir William Armstrong and Co. and other eminent makers of this class of machinery. As one engine would supply the water to all the cranes,

A MEPTING of the New South Wales Cricket Association was held last evening, at Tatternall's Hotel, to consider the position of the Association in connection with the Melbourne Cricket Club as to the Intercolonial Match. The hon. secretary reported the receipt of further correspondence on the subject, merely intimating that the resolution previously arrived at by the M. C. C. would be adhered to. After some desultory discussion, the following resolutions was noved by Mr. Reid, and seconded by Mr. R. 1. That the refusal of the Victorian Match Committee for reasons of their own to receive a team from this colony during the present season does not vitiate the right of the cricketers of New South Wales to play the match of the following season in Sydney.

2. That this meeting as a season does not vitiate the right of the receives the right of the Melbourne Committee to decide these matters as is attempted in the letter of Mr. Handfield on the 27th March last, without mutual concurrence.

THE GLACIAL REOCH.

Ir has been recently said that this is the age of exploration. But the term is capable of a "ery wide significance. For, independent of territorial considerations, there are thousands of channels in which, at the present time, the minds of men are directed towards the discovery of facts, albeit, not necessarily, towards that of truth. The inquisitiveness of research has accended far beyond the world which we inhabit, and whilst it has penetrated with bold and presumptuous aim int ventured to sift the hypotheses of material philosophy, and to test the mysteries of the Universe by the trials of experiment, and the of evidence. Old theories and conjectural explorations are now made to yield to demonstration from facts, real or supposed which have to be ascertained by complicated these may have as great a charm as to others is presented by a criticism of legislative enact ments, or a discussion on a Parliamentary debates whose range of thought is not con-fined to official discussion. We have had in our midst speculators who, renouncing the dicts of astronomers, have proposed, as the from the sun to the earth by a method of great ingenuity, but of too simple a character to meet the sifficulties of the case, and who are meet the eificulties of the case, and who are as anxious as Mr. Dumaresq to account for the terrestrial phenomens of climate, and its consequences to animal life in long-past epochs, by the old-fashioned notion of a change in the porition of the axis of the earth. Refuted a thousand times, men return to their true in early conjectures only to be their trust in early conjectures only to met by some more recent and equally startling invention of combined imagination and know-

There is no intention to trouble the reader with any claborate reasoning on either of the hypotheses which have just been men-tioned. But as a subject of novelty no doubt o some, and as an excellent example of what is going on in the setentific world, it is pro-posed to notice a new speculation respecting the earth, which has not yet obtained the sanction of all astronomers, but which may, after all, work its way into a some what general recognition when further investigation tigation and fuller consideration shall have softened down the rude reception so frequently given to the proposers of fresh methods in philosophy, or to new discoveries in physics.

earth was partially—if not universally—covered with a thick coating of ice is, itself, of almost yesterday's date; and yet it has, contrary to some doctrines that are of older origin, been adopted wholly, or to a great extent, by some of the most distinguished geologists. Some such occurrence is necessary to explain certain observed facts which meet the eye of every observer of wide portions of the terrestrial surface, and if this speculation has been by some authors carried further than it ought to have been, as when it is made to explain what may be more simply as well as equally consistently accounted for, the value of the hypothesis, though abridged, is not ignored. We may accept or the demonstrations which have been abundantly criticized and largely admitted, that at some period, probably not very much anterior to, if not contemporaneous with, the present human epoch, a change had occurred in the condition of the earth, and that such a state of things as is known to exist for several degrees of latitude round either pole, then obtained far down the parallels on either side of the Equator. The questions, of course, arise, when and how?

These have been endeavoured to be accounted for in a work* published last year by Lieutenant-Colonel Drayson, R.A., F.R.A.S., who in his preface points out that his work is intended to explain that of the three principal movements of the earth, one, "as at present period, probably not very much anterior intended to explain that of the three principal movements of the earth, one, "as at present interpreted, presents a geometrical impossibility which renders the interpretation untenable." He says an examination of the movement of the earth which he advances "reveals the fact that it is one which fully explains the recorded observations of astronomy with minute accuracy, which the present accounted movement cannot explain, and present accepted movement cannot explain, and also gives a full and complete explanation of the glacial epoch of geology, and not only affords an explanation of the effects, but gives the dates and duration of this mysterious

This is, doubtless, a comprehensive thesis and one not fitted for thorough consideration in these columns. Indeed, part of the author's argument is not yet forthcoming, though he announces it in a work about to be published, explaining "the cause of the so-called proper motion of the fixed stars, with a suggestion for a new standard measure of time."

In his present work Lieutenant-Colone
Drayson founds all his calculations on Geo metry; and in the conclusion of his first chapter makes a remark which will equally apply to this notice of it—"Clear as most of the details of a scientific investigation must naturally prove to some readers, yet the im-portance of the subjects treated of will, we trust, cau-e some interest to be taken" in it.

He enters into the whole question of the movements of the earth, and, whilst not interfering with the received doctrines of the earth's rotation and revolution, attempts to show that whatever may be the change in direction of the whatever may be the change in assection of the earth's axis (amounting to about one degree in 180 years), this change is not produced by any movement within the earth nor by the pole of the earth tracing a circle round the pole of the ecliptic as a centre, the explanation of which by modern astronomers is by the author contended against nomers is by the author contended against. His proposition amounts to this difference, that the centre of the circle traced in the heavens by the pole of the earth is situated six degrees from

Under this conclusion would result that about 13,700 n c. the same conditions which now distinguish the climate of the earth at 67 degrees of latitude must then have occurred in latitude 55; that, therefore, in the whole of in latitude 55; that, therefore, in the whole of Scotland, and the greater part of England and Wales at the winter solatice, the rivers would have been frozen and blocked with ice, the whole country covered with a mantle of snow and ice, and those creatures which could neither migrate nor endure the cold of an arctic climate would be exterminated." The whole of the region mentioned "would be in darkness, and would not see the sun for several days." sun for several days."

At the summer solution the latitude of 54 degrees would enjoy "the climate of the South of Italy, the South of Spain, and in all localities having now a latitude of 40 degrees." There would then have been "a fierce oscillation of climate in both northern and southern hemis-pheres. Each winter England and all localities with the same latitude would have experienced an arctic cold," but "in summe the same localities, liberating icebergs which floated over the country, carrying with them their freight of boulders, gravel, &c." The snow and the same localities would be shown and the same localities with the same localities wit with the same localities with the same localities with the same be lossened, and then these masses slipping over the rocks, would leave their scratchings and marks in localities where snow and ice are now rarely found in any quantities. Each winter the whole northern and southern hemispheres would be one mass of ice; each summer nearly the whole ice of each hemisphere would be melted and dispersed.

"These effects would neither be local not partial. They would cover the whole northern and southern hemispheres, and would be par-ticularly marked in those latitudes which were then on the borders of the arctic circls—viz., from about 35 to 60 degrees of latitude."

This illustration must suffice on the present occasion. Other consequences must, however, have ensued : for whilst the heat was very great in the northern, in the southern hemisphere the cold would be equally great, and all animals must either have migrated or perished. The author calculates, that as the African elephants, browsing as they go, travel from 15 to 20 miles a day, and in three months might travel 1500 to 2000 miles, therefore the elephants of India might find their way to Siberia, and there meet with the succulent vegetables caused by the great heat-leaving their bones and tusks to be found 17,000 years afterwards, as they have been, and are now found in the icy mud of the River Lena.

'We may fairly conclude," says the author, "that it is not in regions north of 54, or even near it, that we shall find many remains of the entiquity of man; for if man then lived (?) on earth he would undoubtedly have confined himself to a belt about 30 degrees on each side of the Equator, and the daring hunter and pioneer alone would venture to journey north uring a summer."

is explained that 17,000 years of arctic cold, down to latitude 54°, with 17,000 summers of great heat, up to latitude 70°, are sufficient to have produced the glacial and subsequent phenomena of dispersion, and these periods seem to cover the revolution of the Great objections have been already raised to this doctrine. But the author disposes of most of them in his 7th chapter. The main determination is this—that "the only possible place for the centre of polar motion is a point six degrees from the pole of the ecliptic, and having a right ascension of 264 degrees in 1870."

Frough has been stated to show that a curious question has been raised, and one that may, it is to be hoped, find interest in the minds of many who in this community are looking about for fresh amusement and instruction.

It may be right, in concluding these remarks, to make reference to another author, who, in relation to the argument as to a polar climate in a temperate latitude as deduced from the presence of arctic shells, offers us a check as to the reception of the glacial theory in its entirety. Dr. W. B. Carpenter, in a lecture at Manchester just three years since, collating the evidence as to the currents of the ocean, and the warm and cold areas of the great deeps, told his audience that in one instance scarcely twenty miles separated those areas, in one of which the deposits were living beings of a warm climate, and in the other drift stones and a cold-climate fauna. And he stated that there was one impression which he believed, would be modified by such experiments.

"It has," he says, "been a prevalent opinion amongst geologists that there was at a certain period of the world's history, geologically not very remote, an extremely cold and that this is marked by indications of glaciers in countries where is now no ice at all, and the finding of beds containing arctic shells down in very low latitudes. Now, with regard to glaciers on the land I have nothing to say; these researches do not invalidate any evidence derived from them; but, with regard to the deposit in the sea of organic remains characteristic of Polar sea of organic remains characteristic of Polar regions, you will see at once that we may have these at the present time in any part of the great atlantic bed. We have traced arctic shells as far south as Gibraltar, or nearly, and we have the glacial temperature there; and thus without any difference at all in the terrestrial climate, we may have in the torrid zone the burning sun of the Equator, and a few miles off we may have a glacial temperature at the bettom of the sea. Now, to a certain extent, this does tend to modify geological theory, and it explains facts that were previously difficult to understand."

AMERICAN FINANCE.—The United States Budget (observes the Speciator) will this year show the rather severe deficit of £6,000,000, produced mainly by the action of Congress in taking off taxes, while the Treasury fears that the deficit of next year may be even greater. The official proposal, therefore, is to impose new taxes calculated to yield £8,000,000; but Congress objects to harass the people just when the monetary crisis has stopped trade and emptied so many workshops. The majority, therefore, suggest a lean as the easier policy, which it is, but also a very dangerous precedent. The new taxes would scarcely begin to draw before the crisis will be over, and the slightest evidence of financial cowardice will seriously injure American credit, which rests in no slight degree upon the heroic way in which Congress recently taxed the country as if it wanted to pay off the debt in this generation.

Mulloon Copper Co.—The mining manager reports, under date February 28:—"In the 120-feet level engine shaft we expect to be under bottom of new shaft during course of nest week. The dressing floors are busly being prepared, and when completed stoping will be recommenced. Now that our engine and jigging machinery are on the way hera, the foundation walls have been commenced, and already the boiler has been placed, and during last week a fine brick engine stack was completed, having been built on an elevation, at some distance from boiler frees. Smelting works: The No. I furnace has been completed, and for the past week has had a slow fire in it. Theiror nothing has now arrived, and will be put on during next week, after which the completion of No. 2 furnace will only take a few days."

Mathewson's G. M. Co.—Under data 28th February, the mining manager reports as follows:—"We have been engaged all the week in timbering down the bottom of the shaft. It is now finished, and everything is in good order to start staking on Monday. We have plenty of good air new in the mine. The sinking will be carried on by six men, with two shifts."
